January 2016 Reflections
Director Linda Adams

Our 50th Anniversary this year entices us to dream about the future. Where are we headed? How can we grow to do even more of the important work we have been doing for 50 years? An audacious question crossed my mind: How could we double, from 20,000 to 40,000 children? An obvious answer is that our current stakeholders — sponsors, donors, churches, advocates, ambassadors — are our frontline force for getting the word out. Would you take up the challenge of “reproducing yourself” so we can double our impact in the coming years? Join us in our prayer that we can bless, educate, protect, and feed twice as many children, doubling our impact in the coming years. Lives are being changed, one at a time. Let’s change more!

"CNN Heroes" aired recently, celebrating ten people who selflessly serve humanity. Their top hero was Maggie Doyne, who combats trafficking in Nepal by bringing girls into a home and providing them with an education. She helps 50 girls. Good! As I watched the program, the faces that filled my mind were of ICCM's

"unsung heroes," our National Coordinators who tirelessly work for the benefit of our 20,000 impacted children. Here they are. Look at their beautiful faces! Appreciate their sacrifice, their prayers, their endless efforts to facilitate your sponsorship and build up the lives of children. Three cheers for the ICCM HEROES!
